

Abstract Of The Disclosure

In a method and a system for controlling a driver-assistance device, in which measured quantities to be recorded by sensors are evaluated for triggering a reaction, and measuring instants are determined through essentially repeating cycles for acquiring and evaluating the 5 measured quantities, the measuring instants are controlled in such a way that one of the measuring instants follows as immediately as possible an instant at which measured quantities giving rise to a triggering probably exist.